

Bubblegum Weekly News

January 8-12, 2018

INSIDE THE CLASSROOM

- We welcomed everyone back and jumped right in to our Human Body theme this week. We found our blood with flashlights next to our skin and we heard our heart beats with stethoscopes. We also felt our hard bones that make up our skeletons and learned that our tongue is an example of the muscles in our bodies.
- With their eyes wide open, one of our Bubblegum friends asked if they just pulled a muscle out of their body when they picked their nose.
- We also had fun learning the letters D and P in our Get Set for School Activity books and with our show-n-tell items.
- As part of our social and emotional lesson this week, we examined what worry looks like. All week long we thought about things that can make us worry. More importantly, we explored how we can find solutions to the things that cause us to worry.

Farm Friends

Jack the Rabbit is our featured farm friend this month. We are starting our investigative process by asking the children what they already know about rabbits and what they want to know about rabbits as we go on a journey to get some answers. Next week Jack will be paying the Crackerjacks a visit in the classroom!
